DNA amplification assays demonstrate positive staining in a minority of lung tumor samples (Table 9, PRO1153). This low occurence of true positives in a noisy environment of probable true negatives, false positives and false negatives means that the disclosed nucleic acid (SEQ ID NO: 350) and claimed polypeptide (SEQ ID NO: 351) are not useful for diagnosing cancer. In addition, there is little information disclosed about the function of the claimed polypeptide. Since a substantial function has not been attributed to the disclosed PRO nucleic acid or polypeptide, detecting the polypeptide also has no function. In addition, since the disclosed nucleic acid and polypeptide have not been shown to possess a substantial or well-established Utility, one of skill in the art would not know how to use the claimed polypeptide. In addition, the claims embrace polypeptides with 80-99% sequence identity to SEQ ID NO: 351; Applicants were not in possession of a genus of polypeptides that differed from the disclosed polypeptide (SEQ ID NO: 351) by as much as 10%...
